mistaken. It is just what any one, in telligently appreciating the situation in the South, might expect. The democratic papers have been fond of quoting President Johnson's restoration policy pretending to 'justify it in one breath while in the next they vehemently de nounced all interference with the voluntary reconstruction inangurated by the people of the robel States themselves. President Johnson, as well as time I fectured in St. Louis.

This last time I fectured in St. Louis and know, has step by step been leading, directing, urging, yea goading, the last of the very significant dispatches. Never in the broady of the paper of the step is traily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once so directly and arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once so directly and arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once so directly and arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once so directly and arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once as officed pand arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised at once as officed pand arbitrarily as it has been in the hands of any one has its peen exercised over the deliberations of a civilian body like the members of a State Legislature. The fermion of the centre proceeds of the lecture, and let me the distinct of a state, we can not see an incentral execution of the proposed of the centre proceeds in his hitherto untrode part with the life ourselves taxed to conclude without doubt that what is being done to give the construction, finds itself in the entire of construction, finds itself in the extraordinary nature of his situation, and in his message, he candidly avowable the entire referred.

As it is with the President, so it is with Congress. That body, charged chiefly and work sharp, two days are as gone of each of the proceeds in his hitherto untrode part of the construction

As it is with the President, so it is with Congress. That body, charged chiefly with the high duties and responsibilities of reconstruction, finds itself no less than the President, in an unparalleled situation. Indeed, now that Congress has assembled, the President insolution and the following responsibilities of reconstructions finds itself no less than the President, in an unparalleled situation. Indeed, now that Congress has assembled, the President insolution and the following responsibilities of the American people, is the earnest description of the Ministry of Virginia requiring those of any portion of the American people, is the earnest description of the Ministry of Virginia requiring laws of the United States.

In the House of Delegates Mr. Hirah, of Norfolk country, offered the following, which was laid on the table:

When are in the nidst of Revolution! Genuine European perfumes are no longer procurable here. The tariff blockades our ports against them. But in their place stands Phalon's "Night in their place stands Phalon's "Nigh intelligent feel that the prime necessity is time for the fullest examination. Those who claim seats, even loyal men, from states lately in rebellion must wait. It is one of the least of the hardships entailed by the war most surelythe mightiest conspiracy ever known, was crushed. All the States participations between the states participations and the states participations and the states participations are stated as a second state of the service, when on his way home, was crushed. was crushed. All the States participating in that conspiracy have a status different from those that were loyal and steadfast. Who shall say now what that status is? Who will say that it is not wise on the part of Congress to close its doors to every probable danger? It would be impossible to undo the evil that might result from a policy less prudent than that resolved upon thus far. We owethe South nothing except what we owe to the common country. We have a right to result for fear from her representatives. Their antecesients are generally suspicious. This is not the time for a reactionary element to be installed in influential position. We have a right to presume against the good intentions of the South, even had we not the facts before us that have occurred since the war. The country will overwhelmingly sustain Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National State of the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National State of the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National State of the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National States in the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National stand side until the National States in the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National States in the Congress in hidding her stand aside until the National States in hidding her stand aside until the National States in hidding her stand aside until the National States in hidding her stand aside until the National States in hidding her stand aside until the National States in hidding her stand aside until the National States in the Constitution reach in the constitution of the States is not a national song. Union should be the word; but there is a word wanting to song would be one under of expressing it. Denomark, Sweden, &c., are national song. The New York Times says of Gen.

Grant's report that there is nothing in millitary literature comparable with it, and that "it is more compact than Caear, more lucid than Jonnial, more purposent than Napher. It covers the operations of a mightler army, operating over a vaster surface, than ever was marshaled by any commander. It will command the attention of the soldiers of the world, and will be read by the generations as long as the great war of secession is romembered. The report embraces but one year out of the four years of war. But it was a year in which such a number of command officers in guived honorable—that it seems the which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions battles were fought and won—in which such a number of command officers in the such multitudions and such as the such multitudions and such as the such multitudions such as the such multitudions and such as the such multitudions a bewildering mass of movements were made from points all but innumerable, in which such a number of commanding officers figured honorably or otherwise—that it seems, in perusing the report, which embraces the whole in its scope, as if we were reading of a central control of the control of th scope, as if we were reading of a cen-
